Guidance for European Companies on Hiring Refugees From Ukraine

March 2023
Since Russia’s invasion of Ukraine on 24 February 2022, more than 8.1 million refugees from Ukraine have been recorded across Europe.¹ This mass exodus of people is one the fastest forced displacement crises in history and the largest since the Second World War.²

As of 28 February 2023, millions of refugees from Ukraine have crossed borders into neighbouring countries, with Poland hosting the most people (1.6 million).³

Many other refugees have moved on to western and southern European countries, including Germany, Spain, the UK, France, and the Netherlands.⁴ Recorded refugee numbers ebb and flow as people return to Ukraine either permanently or temporarily to reunite with family, pick up supplies, or because they perceive their home to be safe.

The table below shows the top 15 locations in Europe where refugees from Ukraine have been recorded.⁵

About the EU’s Temporary Protection Directive

To help countries deal with such high numbers of displaced people arriving at their borders, the European Union (EU) activated the Temporary Protection Directive (TPD) on 4 March 2022 to enable EU Member States to move rapidly to offer protection and rights to people fleeing Ukraine. It grants individuals immediate protection, as well as access to housing, employment, medical care, education, and more for up to three years. According to the UN’s Refugee Agency (UNHCR), more than 4.8 million refugees from Ukraine have registered for temporary protection across Europe.⁶ The UK, which is no longer an EU Member State, has not adopted the directive, instead implementing alternative national protection schemes.

What educational and professional backgrounds do refugees from Ukraine have?

With Ukraine’s general mobilisation order requiring men aged 18 to 60 to stay within the country, UNHCR estimates that 90% of refugees from Ukraine are women and children.7

According to UNHCR:

7 in 10 Ukrainian refugees have "completed higher levels of education" (i.e., have a bachelor’s degree or higher)

63% were employed or self-employed before leaving Ukraine, with “diverse professional and occupational backgrounds”

Have refugees from Ukraine successfully integrated into host countries’ labour markets?

While 35% of Ukrainian refugees in Europe are currently employed or self-employed (in their host country or remotely), “the majority are employed at a lower level than previously in Ukraine, with a higher prevalence among women than men,” according to UNHCR.9 An estimated 12% of Ukrainian refugees are engaged in professional training. More than one in five refugees are unemployed and actively looking for work opportunities.10

Although childcare has been identified by UNHCR as a barrier to accessing employment, “limited knowledge of the local language”, “skills mismatches”, and “difficulties in skills recognition and lack of decent work opportunities” are more prevalent.11

What role can business play?

Refugees from Ukraine need support to be included in host countries’ labour markets. Employment opportunities are key to helping refugees to build lives of dignity, become self-sufficient contributors to the economy and society, and to reduce the risk of them becoming exploited or abused.

Companies can help by hiring refugees from Ukraine, and offering them training and mentorship. More than simply a moral imperative, the business case for doing so is clear and growing:

- Refugees are highly resilient and motivated employees
- Refugee employees are known for lower turnover\(^\text{12}\)
- Hiring refugees has been found to strengthen the employer’s brand\(^\text{13}\)
- Companies with diverse workforces out-innovate and out-perform others\(^\text{14}\)

What is next for the Ukraine crisis?

Increasing and potentially sudden inflows of refugees from Ukraine into Europe are predicted for 2023, with forecasts ranging from 500,000 to 4 million, according to the International Center for Migration Policy Development. Against a “backdrop of severe war damage, a wounded critical infrastructure, and enormous economic and humanitarian challenges”, it says a second large-scale outflow of refugees “cannot be ruled out” for the rest of the year.\(^\text{15}\)

What this resource is, and who it is for

This resource provides potential employers in Europe with information about the rights that refugees from Ukraine have to work in the following countries: Poland; the Netherlands; Germany; France; and the UK. It includes:

A general overview of the EU’s TPD, including the rights it offers, to whom, and for how long

Information on how individual EU Member States have applied the directive, as well as how the UK’s alternative national protection schemes work

What employers need to know about the legalities of hiring refugees from Ukraine

More countries will be added to this resource in the near future.

What is the Temporary Protection Directive?

The TPD was developed by the European Commission (EC) in 2001 in the aftermath of the conflicts in former Yugoslavia. It is a measure that enables EU Member States to move rapidly to offer protection and rights in the event of a mass influx of displaced people, and to avoid overwhelming national asylum systems.

The TPD remained unused for more than 20 years until it was activated for the first time on 4 March 2022 following Russia’s invasion of Ukraine on 24 February 2022. Due to a “clear risk that the asylum systems of EU countries would be unable to process applications within the deadlines set”, the European Council unanimously adopted the EC’s proposal to activate the directive, granting individuals fleeing Ukraine immediate protection.16

By implementing the TPD, the EU, which was in deadlock for years over common action over asylum, has shown remarkable and resolute support for Ukraine, as well as its citizens and residents displaced by Russia’s invasion.

What rights does the directive offer?

The TPD defines the decision-making procedure needed to initiate, extend, or end temporary protection. It also lists the rights for beneficiaries, which are:

- A residence permit for the entire duration of the protection (which can last from one to three years, although the EC has recommended that EU Member States grant residence permits for two years from the outset)
- Appropriate information on temporary protection
- Guarantees for access to the asylum procedure
- Access to employment, subject to rules applicable to the profession, national labour market policies, and general conditions of employment
- Access to suitable accommodation or housing
- Access to social welfare or means of subsistence if necessary
- Access to medical care
- Access to the state education system for people under 18 years old
- Opportunities for families to reunite in certain circumstances
- Access to banking services (e.g., opening a basic bank account)
- The ability to move to another EU Member State before the issuance of a residence permit
- The ability to move freely to other EU countries (other than the Member State of residence) for 90 days within a 180-day period after a residence permit in the host country has been issued

Being a beneficiary of temporary protection does not preclude the possibility of applying for refugee status at any time.

In June 2022, the EC issued further guidance on how EU Member States can better integrate people under temporary protection into labour markets and support their access to vocational education and training, and adult learning. In particular, it encouraged countries to provide support to employers hiring people fleeing and make allowances for the creation of start-ups.17

The registration procedure for temporary protection varies between countries, but they all require that applicants submit some form of documentation, whether photographic ID, proof of residence, proof of family relationship, and/or something else.

As of October 2023, refugees from Ukraine in Europe who decide to return home will no longer have to de-register from the temporary protection system (which was previously the case). This is to facilitate refugees’ possible return to Europe if necessary.

How long is temporary protection valid for?

A person’s temporary protection granted by the TPD currently lasts until 4 March 2024. If the reasons for temporary protection remain, the EU Council may vote to extend the directive upon the recommendations of the EC by one more year, until 4 March 2025.

National variations

The purpose of the TPD is to establish minimum standards for giving temporary protection. This means that individual EU Member States can go further than what is set out in the directive – for example, by granting more generous rights or widening the scope of who is eligible.

There are other national variations. The directive does not apply to Denmark, for example, due to its opt-out from EU policies (although it has introduced a similar status via national legislation). Because it is no longer an EU Member State, the UK is also not bound by the TPD. Instead, it has introduced alternative national protection programmes.

Who is eligible for temporary protection?

Ukrainian nationals residing in Ukraine before 24 February 2022 (the first day of Russia’s invasion), and their family members

Stateless people and nationals of other third countries who benefited from international protection or equivalent protection in Ukraine before 24 February 2022, and their family members

Non-Ukrainian nationals of third countries and stateless people who can prove that they were legally residing in Ukraine before 24 February 2022 on the basis of a valid permanent residence permit issued in accordance with Ukrainian law, and who cannot return in safe and durable conditions to their country of origin. These people are eligible for either temporary protection or adequate national protection, depending on the EU country they are in.

The following people shall be considered to be part of a family, so long as the family was already present and residing in Ukraine before 24 February 2022:

A spouse or unmarried partner in a stable relationship, where the legislation of the EU Member State treats unmarried couples in a way that is comparable to married couples under national immigration laws

The minor unmarried children of a person or their spouse, without distinction as to whether they were born in or out wedlock, or adopted

Other close relatives who lived with the family, upon whom they are largely or wholly dependent

In 2003, France added the TPD to its immigration laws. It activated the directive on 10 March 2022 following the EU Council’s vote to implement the directive on 4 March 2022.

Who is eligible for temporary protection?

People are eligible for temporary protection in line with the minimum framework of the TPD (see “Who is eligible for temporary protection?” in the Essential information about TPD chapter). However, there is one notable extension of the scope: family members of the “non-Ukrainian nationals of third countries and stateless people” group of people are also eligible for temporary protection.

Currently, the following individuals are not covered by the TPD:

- Ukrainian nationals who hold a residence permit in France that has expired (these individuals should contact their local prefecture to discuss their situation)
- Third country nationals who can return to their country of origin in safe and sustainable conditions (these individuals’ right of residence will be assessed separately by their local prefecture)
- Third-country nationals arriving from Ukraine whose asylum application was being considered in Ukraine on 24 February (these people can apply for asylum in France)

To register for temporary protection, individuals must go to their local prefecture, provide the relevant documentation justifying their situation (e.g., a passport, national ID card, or Ukrainian consular certificate), and/or be accompanied by members of their family (spouse and children).

If the individual’s documentation is complete and in accordance with requirements, they will be granted protection, issued a temporary residence permit, and referred to the French Office for Immigration and Integration (OFII).

The temporary residence permit is valid for six months. Individuals can renew their temporary residence permit at their local prefecture. They should apply for renewal between three weeks and three days before the expiration of their permit. They will need to submit documentation including confirmation of their civil status and citizenship, their previous temporary residence permit, confirmation of address, and any additional documentation confirming any change in their social situation (e.g., an employment contract).

Who is eligible to work?

Beneficiaries of temporary protection are authorised to work, become self-employed, or start a business as soon as they obtain their temporary residence permit, subject to the rules of regulated professions (e.g., architects, lawyers, physiotherapists).

Before hiring a temporary residence permit holder, employers must first check the validity of the residence permit. The employer must send a copy of the residence permit to the local prefecture where the employee is hired, or the Paris Police Prefecture (“Préfet de Police”) when the employee is hired in Paris. This must be done at least two business days before the first day of work. If the prefecture does not answer the request within the two days, it is deemed valid. This requirement does not apply for refugees from Ukraine registered with France’s unemployment agency, Pôle Emploi.

After this, the employer should proceed with regular hiring procedure. They must:

- Draft and mutually sign an employment contract with the employee
- Prior to hiring, make a declaration of employment ("déclaration préalable à l’embauche") to URSSAF ("Union de Recouvrement des Cotisations de Sécurité Sociale et d’Allocations Familiales")
- Schedule a medical exam ("médecine du travail") within the first three months of employment
- If the individual is not registered with the national health insurance administration ("CPAM"), they must be registered by the employer

If they choose to, employers can also get help from the government to share any jobs they are offering to refugees from Ukrainian. To do so, they can fill out an online form about the positions with Pôle Emploi. Once completed, someone from the agency’s team will contact the company to publish a job posting.
